

A process for transforming urban wastewater into usable energy via microbial electrolysis

The system integrates filtration, microbial fuel cells, and smart grid output to convert waste into electricity and clean water, promoting urban circular sustainability.